Republican Congressional District Convention.

FIRST DISTRICT. A Republican Convention of the First Conressional District of the State of Wisconsin composed of the counties of Kenosha. Racine. Watworth, Rock and Jefferson, is hereby called to meet at the village of Geneva, in Walworth county, on the 16th day of August, 1882, at 12 o'clock noon of that day, to nominate a candidate for Congress for the District for the next ensuing two years. Each Senate and Assembly District will be entitled to two delegates in the

The Republicans of the Freeport Congressional district made a strong Hitt when they nominated Robert R. Hitt for Congress. Hitt was Lincoln's short-hand reporter during his memorable debates with Douglas in 1858.

There is a prospect that Sergeant Mason will be released, the Judge Advocate General of the United States, in his report to the Secretary of War, expressing that opinion. When Secretary Lincoln returns to Washington he and the President will take some action on the matter.

Senator Ben Hill has been in a precarious condition for some time, and the latest report is that he is on his deathbed. His physicians say that his recovery is impossible, and that he cannot survive many weeks. As politics generally goes, it is about time that some one should begin to make a scramble for his place in the Senate.

"Tug" Wilson, the English pugilist, made $16,000 on Monday night, in his contest with Sullivan. The contest lasted fifteen minutes, in which Wilson was knocked down nine times, but having and the propositions and resolution were blows from Sullivan for four rounds, he won $1,000 from Sullivan, got $8,000 which rejection. was one-half of the gate money, and won $7,000 from other persons.

The story is going the rounds of the press that when Judgo W. H. Hant retired from Arthur's cabinet as Secretary of the Navy, to accept the position of Minister to Russia, he was in doubt whether he could maintain the dignity of his position because of his poverty, Ho accepted the position, however, and the story goes that shortly after he started on his mission, an old and wealthy tobacco dealer in New Orleans, who had been a life long friend of the Judge, died and bequeathed his entire fortune, which was quite considerable, to the ex-Secretary.

MILWAUKEE BOYCOTTING.

For two or three days past there have been a number of dispatches sent from Milwaukee in regard to the action of the browers of that city toward the signers of the petition who asked that the theaters of Milwaukee be closed on Sunday. When the people there asked that places of amusements be closed on Sundays, the petition was signed by a very large number of business men, among them many of the solid men of the city. Then came the report over the wires that the brewers had held a meeting and had determined to insult the intelligence of the friends of the Sunday law and order by agreeing not to deal with any of the merchants whose names appeared on the petition, and also instructed their employes, some three thousand all told, not to buy a single article of these who favored the closing of the theaters and Sunday. While some of the leading Germans in Milwaukee favored the boycotting system, others did not, and it now appears from the Milwaukee Republican-Sentinel, that there has been a misunderstanding in regard to the attitude of the brewers in that city on the subject. They have not entered into any agreement to boycott the signers of the letters or petition respecting the closing of the theaters, and will not According to this statement of the case, the Gormans, of Milwankee have had a great injustice done them, and the papers that have published the telegrams announcing the boycotting scheme, should be fair enough to make a

One German in Milwaukee, the president of the Brewers' Association, emphatically denies that the brewers have made any such threats, and further he says it is a question which does not concern brewers at all, and that they have no complaint to make against those who disapprove of Sunday theaters.

But it appears that the day for compromising has gone by, and that the only way to test the question as to cleeted by 30,000 majority. which faction is the strongest and in the right, is to submit the matter to the judgment of the people of Peansyl-vaina at the election next November. That the readers of the Gazette may clearly understand the nature of the propositions submitted by the Regular Republicans and the Independent Republicans, looking toward a settlement of the difference between them, we give the proposition, of each faction. By examining each proposition and considering the reasons of each faction for refusing to compromise on the terms offered, our readers can decide for themselves as to which wing of the party will be held responsible for a defeat of the Republican party in Pennsylvania, should such a misfortune overtake it. On the 12th of July, the Regular Republican State committee met at Philadelphia for the purpose of taking some action which would bring about harmony in the party. Accordingly, it adopted the following propositions and resolution:

First-The tickets headed by James A. Beavor and John Stowart respectively to be sabmitted to a vote of the Republican electors of the State at primaries as hereinafter provided for. Second-The selection of candidates to be voted for by the Republican party in November to be submitted as aforesaid, every Republican elector constitutionally and legally qualified to be eligible to nomination.

Third-A State Convention to be held to b constituted as recommended by the Continental Hotel Conference, whereof Wharton Barker was chairman and Francis B. Reeves secretary, to select candidates to be voted for by the Re-publican party in November, its choice to be limited to the candidates now in nomination orunlimited as the Independent State Committee may prefer.

Resolved, That in the opinion of the Republican State Committee the above propositions fully carry out in letter and spirit the resolu-tion passed by the Harrisborg Convention June 21, and that we hereby pledge the State Committee to carry out in good faith any one of the foregoing propositions which may be accented.

On the part of the Regular Republicans, this was thought to be a reasonable basis on which to settle the difficulty, physical courage enough to endure the submitted to the Independent Republican candidates for their acceptance or

> On the 13th of July, the Independent Republican candidates met in Philadelphia to consider the above propositions. There was harmony in the meeting, and after a pretty thorough discussion of each proposition, it was decided to reject all of them, and as a substitute, the Independent Republican candidates prepared the following propositions, which were submitted to the Regular Republican candidates:

1. The withdrawal of both tickets. 2. The several candidates of these tickets to plodge themselves not to accept any subsequent nomination by the proposed convention Under these conditions we will unite with you in urging upon our respective constituensies the adoption of the third proposition submitted by your committee, and conclude the whole controversy by our final withdrawal as candidates. Such withdrawal of both tickets would remove from the canvass all personal, as well as political, antagonisms, and leave the party united and unembarrassed.

GEORGE W. MERRICK. GEORGE JUNEIN.

The Executive committee of the Regular Republican State committee, met in Philadelphia on the 18th day of July, and discussed the propositions submitted by the Independent Republicans, and unauimously agreed to reject them. The Regular Republican candidates also joined with the Executive committee in declining to accept the Independents' terms of a settlement, and sent the for as lawyers never having been raised in lowing latter to Charman Copper of the this State, the County Court reserved the lowing letter to Chairman Cooper of the Regular Republican State committee explaining their course:

The propositions of the Independents asks us as a condition precedent to any recommenda-tion on the part of the writers thereof, to doclare, in the event of calling a new convention, that we will forbid the Republicans of Pennsyl vania to call upon us for our services as candidates for the various positions to be filled by the people at the coming election. To say that, in an effort to determine whether or not our iomination was the free and unbiased choice of the Republican party, we must not be candidates is simply to beg the question at issue. We have no desire to discuss this question on its numerous bearings. We have placed ourselves unreservedly in the hands of the Republicans of Pennsylvania. We have pledged ourselves to net concurrently with your committee and are bound by its action. We therefore respectfully suggest that we have no power or authority to act independently of the committee or to make any declaration at variance with the proposi-tions submitted in accordance with its action. There ought to be and can be no such thing es personal antagonism in this contest. We severally and emphatically disclaim even the remotest approach to a feeling of this kind toward any person. We fraternize with, and are ready to support any and every citizen who loves the cause of pure republicanism, and with this declaration we submit the whole matter to your judgment and wise consideration. JAMES A. BEAYER, WM. H. RAWLE, WM. T. CAVIS. MARRIOTT BROSIUS.

This ends the matter so far as an attempt to compromise is concerned. The Regulars wanted the question of differences submitted to the primaries, and at their primaries, the Republican party tions for a settlement of the differences | should elect its ticket by a popular vote existing between the Republican factions and any man on either of the present in Pennsylvania are ended, and that there | tickets shall be a candidate if he wanted

But Chairman Cooper, of the Regtime when the signs indicated that there ular Republican committee, thinks the refusal of the Independents to accept the propositions of the Regulars, will cost the Independents nine-tenths of their following. He thinks they can not hold 25,000 votes, while General Beaver will get 30,000 Democratic votes, and will be

WOMAN'S RIGHTS.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 19 .-- The Supreme Court of Errors, the higest tribunal in the State, to-day decided, in a test case, that women are not ineligible to admission as attorneys because of sex. A test case was made on the application of Miss Mary Hall, who has been a student for years in the law office of the Hon. John Hooker. Mr. Hooker and his wife, Mrs. Isabella Beecher Hooker, prominent in the women's right movement, have taken an active interest in Miss Hall's application. The applicant passed a very substactory examination several months ago, but in the absence of any precedent, the question of the eligibility of women matter of admission for the opinion of the Supreme Court. Miss Hall will now renew her application, or the court may act upon the one now pending.

JUSTICE AGAIN.

Washington, July 19 .- Another colored representative from the South onsted a Democrat to-day, the vote being 141 yeas against 5 mays on the question of giving Robert Smalls the seat of George D. Tillman, of South Carolina. From the outset the proceedings were interesting, although the palm for humor was awarded to Mr Horr, of Michigan, who enjoyed himself and amused the spectators with his caustic jibes at the Democratic contestee. His strongest Democratic contestee. His strongest point was exhibiting a map in which the redistricting of South Carolina was set out, and in a dispute between himself and Atherton, of Ohio, the latter referred to the gerrymandering of certain portions of the Buckeye State as boing a disgraceful as the villarnous system in South Carolina. Mr. Horr extolled the virtues of the Republican party at great length, and declined to be interrupted by the other side.

A YOUTHFUL WITNESS.

LANCASTER, July 19-Geo. Stout, one of the defendants in the Sisley tragedy took the witness stand this morning. He is S years old, playful, innocent and life tle. There was see-sawing between the lawyers as to his knowledge of his responsibility under oath. When asked if he knew it was wrong to lie, the Court jokingly remarked that lawyers never lied, but the courts told great lies. He thought he was being made fun of and hung his head and cried. In telling who was there he named the defendants, in additton one Annie Who Annie was puzzled everybody until finally the house was amused on learning that Annie was the name of Mrs. Hamilton's baby that had been scattering pencils, paper, and candy in tumbling over spittoons in the court room all this long trial. Thereupon Mr. Bushnell remarked the State should have used the child and had another defendant on trial. George Stout, it seems, has also stood the ordeal of pumping by the prosecuting lawyers separately. Something is attempted to be made out of his talk with playfellows on the street. If is said that he told them that a man came and tied a headlesship around the mouth of Mrs. handkerchief around the mouth of Mrs. Sisley and shot her, and that Sisley and his mother carried her body out and dressed her in the barn. The Art of Making Up Faces Among the Theatrical People.
[Talk of a Professional in New York Sun.]

"It must be a great deal of trouble to make up every night,"

"Ah, but, me boy, look at the result!
Go down to the Thalia Theater, where they still do it, and, if only five years have elapsed between the acts, see how it is shown on every face on the stage." "It is difficult to make up well, is it not?"

"Well, no," said the actor, lighting a fresh cigar and assuming a more confidential pose; "the rules are simple enough, and with a little practice, almost any amateur could learn to make up artistically if he has any eye for effect, Some parts, like Romeo, Charles Surface, Sidney Darrell, and Claude Melnotto, require very little make-up for a young and good-looking actor. The face and neck should be thoroughly covered with white powder and the check-bones and chin lightly touched with rouge, which should not be too red. Then, as the lover ought to look handsome, he should draw a fine black line under his lower cyclashes with a camel-hair brush and burnt nmber. This makes the eyes brilliant. I'm sure it isn't much trouble to make up that way."

"Other characters are harder, though.

"Oh, immeasurably so. But to make a mature man, like Cassio, Iago, Mercutio, John Mildmay or Hawksley, it requires only a little more work. After the actor has faid on the powder and rouged his face pretty heavily—for men are commonly rather red-faced—he must take his brush and limner and trace some lines from the outer corners of his eyes, and other lines down toward the corner of the mouth from the nose. In short, he must make the crow's feet that are visible in all men who have lived over thirty years in this tantalizing world of ours. Then the chin should be touched with a little blue powder, which makes it look as if recently shaved. These precautions will make the most juvenile face look mature. If he has to go further, and look like old age, as in such characters as Lear, Virginius—for, as I said before, Virginius was an old man—Richelieu, Sir Peter Tenzlo, and so on, more work is necessary. Heavy false-eyebrows must be pasted on, and the eye-hollow darkened and fairly crowded with lines. Wrinkles must be painted across the forehead, furrows down the cheek, downward lines from the corners of the mouth, and (very important) tirree or four heavy wrinkles painted around the neck to give it the shriveled appearance common to old age. The hollow over the upper lip should be darkened, and also the hollow under the lower lip. This gives the mouth the pinched and toothless look. A little powdered antimony on the checks makes them look fallen in and shrunken. Then tono the face down with a delicate coating of penri powder, and you'll have as old a locking man as you'd care to see." "How does it all feel?" "At first your face feels tightened, and the muscles don't play easy, but after a few grimaces it comes all right. It is a great relief to get it off, however, after three hours' work."

Nabobs of New York.

"Recurring again, Mr. Hatch, to the three or four very rich men-name them, if you please."

"Well, there are just four of them in the first class. First, Vanderbilt and his sons; second, Russell Sage; third, Jay Gould, and fourth, James Keene. I suppose you refer to men who have directly converted with stock on been directly connected with stock operations. Vanderbilt and his sons, who are all together, have got $300,000. I am sure that this is not overstated, for the 860,000,000 or $70,000,000 they have in Government loans represent their interest as it has accumulated. The next man is Russell Sago, who is richer than Gould. He is worth from $60,000,000 to $75,000,000. Gould is worth $40,000,000 to $50,000,000, and Keens from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000. These are prodigions figures. See what they represent of other men's losses, when you look at the present of other men's losses, when you look at the present state of the stock market and what it is tumbling to. There is about $450,000,000 to $500,-000,000 in the hands of four men, who have made it all around this Stock Exchange out of the gambling propensities and the credulity of the people.—Gath, in Cincinnati Engliser.

THE TWO OLD BACKELORS.

Two old bachelors were living in one house,
One caught a muffin, the other caught a mouse.
Said he who caught the muffin to him who caught the mouse; the mouse:
"This happens Just in time, for we've nothing in the house, Sare a tiny piece of lemon, and a temporarul of And what to do for dinner—since we haven't any But to lose our teeth and eyelashes and keep on growing thinker?"

Said the one who caught the mouse to him who caught the mulfin:

We might cook the little mouse if we only had some stuffin;

If we had but sage and onion we could do extremely had But how to get that stuffin' it is difficult to tell."

These two old bachelors ran quickly to the town, And saked for sage and orders as they wandered up and down.

They borrowed two large onions, but no sage was to be found.

In the shops or in the market, or in all the gardens

But some one said: "A bill there is a little to the And to its perpendicular top a narrow way leads And there among the rugged rocks abides an ancient

"Certainly, widow, certainly," said the elder abstractedly.
"And, elder, as you're here, I hope you will stop to dinner with us. It will

"Well, no," said the elder, rising,
"I'm obliged to ye; but they'll be exDecting me at home." And to its perpendicular top a narrow way leads Then mix him with your onton, cut up likewise pecting me at home."

But that old Sage looked caimly up and with his awful book awful book

At these two batchelors' bald heads a sudden aim

The mouse had fled and previously had eaten up the muths. They left their home in silence, by the once convivial door.

And from that hour those buchelors were never heard of more.

THE POT OF GOLD.

Elder Boyd, though a very good man in the main, and looked up to with respect by all the inhabitants of the village of Oldville, was rumored to have, in Yankee parlance, a pretty sharp look-out for the main chance, a peculiarity from which elders are not always ex-

In worldly matters he was decidedly well-to-do, having inherited a line farm from his father, which was growing yearly more and more valuable. It might be supposed that under these circumstances the elder, who was fully able to do so, would have found a helpmate to share his house and name. But the elder was wary, Matrimony was to him, in some measure, a matter of money, and it was his firm resolve not to marry unless he could thereby enchance his worldly prosperity. Unhappily, the little village of Oldville and the towns in the immediate vicinity consained few who were qualified in the important particular, and of those there were probably none with whom the elder's suit would have prospered. So it happened that year after year passed away, until Elder Boyd was in the prime of life—forty-four, or thereabouts—and still unmarried, and likely to remain so. But in all human remain so. But in all human calculation of this kind, they reckon ill who leave widows out.

Elder Boyd's nearest neighbor was a

The Widow Hayes, who had passed through matrimonial experience, was some four years younger than Elder Boyd. She was still a buxom, comely woman, as widows are apt to be.

Unfortunately the late Mr. Hayes had not been able to leave her sufficient to make her independent of the world. All that she possessed was the small, old-techioned house in which she lived, and a small amount of money, which was in-sufficient to support her and a little son of 8, likewise to be enumerated in the schedule of her property, though hardly to be classed as "productive" of any thing but mischief.

The widow was therefore obliged to take care of three boarders to eke out her scanty income, which, of course, im-posed upon her considerable labor and

Is it surprising that under these circumstances she should now and then have bethought herself of a second marriage as a method of bettering her condition? Or again, need we esteem it a special wonder if, in her reflections spon this point, she should have east her eyes upon her next neighbor, Elder Boyd? The elder, as we have already said, was in flourishing circumstances. He would be able to maintain a wife in great comfort, and, being one of the chief personages in the village, could not be a propried that a propried was a second to be a personages in the village, could not be a personages in the village, could not be a personage and the chief personages in the village, could not be a personage and the chief personages in the village, could not be a personage and the chief personages in the village, could not be a personage and the chief personages in the village, could not be a personage and the chief p pord her a prominent social position. He was not especially handsome, or calculated to make a profound impression upon the female heart; this was true, but he was of a good disposition, kind-hearted, and would no doubt make are, I take it (if any shall do me the honor to read this story, I trust they will fergive the remark), less disposed to weigh sentiment in a second alliance than a first, and so, in the widow's podat of view. Elder Boyd was a very desirable match.

Some sagacious person, however, has observed that it takes two to make a match, a fact to be seriously considered; for in the present case it was exceed-ingly doubtful whether the worthy alder, even if he had known the favorable opinion of his next neighbor, would have been inclined to propose changing her name to Boyd, unless, indeed, a suitable motive was brought to bear apon him. Here was a chance for a little managing, wherein widows are said, as a general thing, to be expert.

One evening, after a day of fatigning labor, Widow Hayes sat at the fire in the sitting-room, with her feet resting on the tender.

"Hever I am situated so as not to have to work so hard," she murmured, "I shall be happy. It's a hard life, keeping boarders. If I was only as well off as Elder Boyd."

Still the widow kept up her thinking, and by any by her fees by sightness.

and by-and-by her face brightened. She had an idea which she resolved to put into execution at the earliest possible moment. What it was the reader will discover in the sequel.

"Freddie," said she to her son the next morning, "I want you to stop at Elder Boyd's when you go to school and ask him if he will call on me in the course of the morning or afternoon, just as he finds it most convenient." Elder Boyd was a little surprised at on the dinner, and had leisure to sit down. She appeared a little embarrassed

"Freddie told me you would like to see me," he commenced.
"Yes, elder, I should. But I am very much afraid you will think strange at least of what I have to say to you." The elder promised very politely not to be surprised, though at the same time curiosity was visibly excited.

"Suppose," said the widow, casting down her eyes—"mind, I was only supposing a case—suppose a person should And what to do for dinner—since we haven't any find a pot of gold pieces in their cellar, money;

And what can we expect, if we haven't any dinner,

and what can we expect, if we haven't any dinner, or would it belong to them?" The elder pricked up his cars.

"A pot of gold pieces, widow? Why, unquestionably, the law would have nothing to do with it."

"And the one who formerly owned."

the house couldn't come forward and claim it, could he, older?' "No, madam; unquestionably not.

When the house was disposed of, everything went with it, as a matter of course."

"I am glad to hear it, older You won't think strange of the question, but it happened to occur in my mind, and I thought I would like to have it satisfied."

taking a piece of mince pie fresh from the even, "you won't object to taking a piece of mince pie. You must know that I rather pride myself on my mince

The warm pie sent forth such a delfcious odor that the elder was sorely tempted, and, after saying, "Well, really," with the intention of refusing, he finished by saying, "On the whole, I guess I will, as it looks so nice."

The widow was really a good cook, and the elder ate with much gusto tho generous piece which the widow cut for him, and after a little chatting upon unimportant subjects, withdraw in some mental perplexity.

Was it possible, thought he, the widow could really have found a pot of gold in her cellar? She did not say so, to be sure, but why should she have shown so much anxiety to know as to the proprietorship of the treasure thus found, if she had not happened upon some? To be sure, so far as his knowledge extended, there was no one who would be likely to lay up such an amount of gold; but the house was 150 years old, at the very least, and had had many occupants of which he knew nothing. It might be after all. The widow's earnest desire to have him think it was only curiosity, likewise gave additional probability to the supposition. "I will wait and watch," thought the elder.

It so happened that Elder Boyd was one of the Directors in a savings institution situated in the next town, and accordingly used to ride over there once or twice a mouth to attend meetings of the board. On the next becasion of this kind the Widow Hayes sent over to know if he would carry her with him, as she had a little business to affend to there. The request was readily accorded. Arriving at the village, Mrs. Hayes desired to be set down at the bank building.

"Ha, ha!" thought the elder, "that means something." Ho said nothing, however, but determined to come back and find out, as he could readily from the cashier, what business she had with the bank. The widow tripped into the office pretending to look very nonchalimt.

"Can you give me small bills for a ten-dollar gold piece?" she inquired.

"With pleasure," was the reply.
"By the way," she said, "the bank is in a very flourishing condition, is it

"None in the State on a better footing," was the prompt response.
"You receive deposits, do you not?"
"Yos, madam; we receive them every

"Do you receive as high as—as ten thousand dollars?"

"No," said the eashier, with some surprise, "or, rather, we do not allow inforest on so large a sum. One thousand dellars is as limit. Did you know and dollars is our limit. Did you know of any one who-

"It is of no consequence," said the widow, hurricelly; "I only asked for enriosity. By the way, did you say how much interest you allowed on such deposits as come within your limit?" "Five per cent., madam."

"Thank you. I only asked for curiosity. What a beautiful morning it is,"

and the widow tripped lightly out. Shortly after the elder entered. "How's business, Mr. Cashier?" he inquired.

'About as usual." "Had many deposits Intely?"

"None of any magnitude."
"I brought over a woman this morning who seemed to have business with

"The Widow Hayes?" "Yes,"

"Yes,"
"Do you know," asked the cashier,
"whether she had any money loft her lately?"
"None that I know of," said the eldor, pricking up his ears. "Why, did she deposit any?"
"No, but he

"No; but she inquired whether we received deposits as high as $10,000."

"Indeed!" ejaculated the elder. "Is that all she came for?" he inquired, a moment afterward.

"No, she exchanged a gold piece for bills." "Ha!" pondored the elder, reflectively. "Did she give any reason for her inquiries?"

"No, she said she only asked for curi-The elder left the bank in deep thought. He came to the conclusion that this curiosity only veiled a deeper metive. He now no longer entertained a doubt that the widow had found a pos of gold in her cellar, and appearances seemed to indicate that its probable valwas at least equal to $10,000. The gold piece which she had exchanged at the bank appeared to confirm this theory.

"I rather think," said the elder to himself, complacently, "I can see into a millstone about as far as most people."

A statement, the literal truth of which I defy any one to question, though as to the prime fact of people being able to the prime fact of people being able to the into a millstone at all doubts have now and then thrust themselves upon wow and then thrust themselves upon my mind.

The next Sunday the Widow Haves appeared at church in a new and stylish bonnet, which led to some such remarks "How much vanity some people have, to be sure!" "How a woman that has to keep boarders for a living can afford to dash out in such a bonnet is more than I can tell. I should think she was old enough to know better."

This last remark was made by a young lady just six months younger than the

THE GAZETTE, this summons. However, about 11 widow, and whose attempts to catch a h'clock he called in. The widow had got second husband had hitherto proved ut-second meaning and interest proved atterly unavailing.

"I suppose," continued the same young lady, "she is trying to catch a first husband with her finery. Before I'd condescend to such means, I'd-l'd drown myself." In this last amiable speech the young lady had unwittingly hit upon the true ractive. The widow was intent upon catching Elder Boyd, and she indulged in a costly bonnet, not because she supposed the elder would be caught with finery, but because this would strength on its bid mind, the idea that she had en in his mind the idea that she had stumbled upon hidden woulth. The widow calculated shrewdly, and the display had the effect she anticipated. Monday afternoon, the elder found an errand that called him over to the widow's. It chanced to be just about ten-time. He was importuned to stay to ten, and, somewhat to his own surprise, notably did, The politic widow, who knew the elder's weak point, brought one of her best mince pies, a piece of which her guest partook of with zesi.

"You'll take another piece, I know,"

said she persussively.

"Really, I am aslamed," said the elder; but he passed his plate. "The fact is," he said apologetically, "your pies are so nice I don't know when to stop." "Do you call those vice?" said the widow, modestly. "I call them common, I can make good mines pies when I set out to, but this time I didn't have as good luck as usual."
"I shouldn't want any better," said the elder, emphatically.

"Then I hope, if you like them, you will drop in to tea often. We ought to be more neighborly, Elder Boyd."

Elder Boyd assented, and he meant what he said. The fact is, the elder began to think that the widow was a very charming woman. She was very comely, and then she was such an excellent cook. Besides, he had no doubt in his own mind that she was worth a considown from the saw was well at considerable sum of money. What objection could there be to her becoming Mrs. Boyd? He brought this question before become evening. The widow blushed, professing to be greatly surprised. In fact, she had never thought of such a thing in her life, but, on the whole, she had always thought highly of the elder, and, to cut the matter short, she accepted him. A month afterward she was installed as mistress of the elder's largo house, somewhat to the surprise of the village people, who could not conceive how she had brought him over. Some weeks after the ceremony, the older ventured to inquire about the pot of gold which she had found in the cellar.

"Pot of gold!" she exclaimed, in surprise; "I know of noue." "But," said the elder, disconcerted,
"you asked me about whother the law could claim it."

"Oh, Lor', elder, I only asked for curiosity.

"And was that'the reason you made inquiries at the bank?"
"Certainly! What else could it be?" The elder went out to the barn, and for half an hour sat in silent meditation. At the end of that time he ojaculated, as a closing consideration:
"After al, she makes good minco

It gives me pleasure to state that the union between the elder and the widow proved a very happy one, although to the end of his life he could never make up his mind about the "Pot of Gold."

A REAL SWEET STORY.

It was by far the worst quarrel the had ever had, and they had had many for she had a tempor and he had a tem per, and they were both of them impulsive young people with very little self-control,

"You are a falso, selfish, untruthful, man-like man," said she.

"And you a suspicious, unreasonable, unwomanly woman," said he.

"Take back your lettors," she cried, flinging a parcel tied with hyacinth-blue ribbon on the floor at his feet.

"I will," he muttered between his clenched teeth, picking up the parcel and throwing it into the fire, where it blazed brightly for a moment or two, and then flew away in thin uneanny black fragment disappeared, Rick turned again to Letty, with frowning brow, and asked, as he had asked before, "Do you still persist in accusing me of deceit and falsehood?"

"I'do," she replied, "unless you show me the charm."

"I' will not show it to you." he declared, with violation of the parcel and hearing no word from Rick, received his attentions in a passive.

me the charm,"

"I will not show it to you," he declared, with violent emphasis. "If my word be not sufficient, I refuse to give you further proof. I wonder that you dare insult me by asking it, And I also wonder how you, believing me to be false and untruthful, can be willing to trust your fulure to me. And, to speak frankly, I begin to think we have made a great mistake in supposing that we could spend that future happily together, for I am fully convinced we are anything but

"Two souls with but a single thought, Two hearls that beat as one."

Two hours that heat as one."

(These lines were quoted with the most sareastic inflection.) "And, furthermore, I also begin to think that perhaps it would have been hetter if we had never made this mistake—if we had never met, in fact."

"Oh; indeed, sir!"—with great assumption of dignity. "Have you just arrived at that conclusion? I have long been sure of it. But there is nothing been sure of it. But there is nothing casier than to part. Your letters are already disposed of. To-morrow I will send back your ring and picture. And then, when I am free oneo more, I can try to please my mother (our nequaintance, as you are well aware, has never pleased her), and in pleasing her I may find I am doing a pleasant as well as a wise thing for myself."

"Are you referring to Brougham

Brown?

Brown?"

"I am referring to Brougham Brown."

"By Heavers!" exclaimed Rick, seizing his hat, "this is too much. Letty, good-by forever."

But Letty began humming an air from "Patience," drumming an accompaniment on the window-pane, and vouchsafed no answer. Rick rushed from the room. The humming and drumming ceased instantly, and the whilom performer listened intently. Five minutes passed, and still the street door did not slam. "He is waiting for me to come out into the is waiting for me to come out into the hall and beg his pardon, I suppose," she said, with a deliant grimace, "but I won't," and she turned again to the window as the door shut with a bang. And then flung herself on the loungo, kicked off her slippers, and cried like a summer shower. Bick gone, and gone "forever!"—Rick, whom she had loved so dearly, and who had loved her so dearly, for two long years. And why? Just because that silly, giggling Lena Varian, with her pale blue eyes and Varian, with her pale blue eyes and straw-colored hair, had chosen to tell fibs about him. And, shaking the tears from her lashes, she began scolding hersolf as hard as she had scolded poor Rick. "The idea, Letty Lounsberry, of your believing that girl before him! What possessed you? He did flirt a little with her, that is true; but all men flirt a little with girls who persist in admiring them and flattering them. But he never gave her the little gold pighe never gave her the little gold pig-your Christmas gift to him-never! How she got it I can't imagine, but he would have explained if you had given him a chance." And then the absent mother, gone to Aunt Emory's for a two days' visit, came in for a share of repreach. "If she had only let our engagement be known, instead of insisting upon our waiting nutil Rick was 21, and I had not been obliged to carry my engagement ring in my back hair, the only place where it is safe from Baby's—Goodness gracious! Baby!" And Letty suddenly remembered that over since Rick came in to make a morning call, knowing Mrs. Lounsberry was absent—poor fellow! he'd have staid away if he could have forescen his reception—Baby had been sitting alone in the dining-room in the middle of the big dining-table sur-rounded by all the pickle and marmalade jars and fruit cans and catchup bottles and jam pots out of the store-room. For it was the monthly house-cleaning day, and the store-room fell to Letty's share, the foreign help being gifted with too great a talent for smashing and breaking, to say nothing of an equallygreat talent for abstracting and devouring both sweets and sours. Letty sprang from the lounge, thrust her feet into her slippers, and hastened where duty had been calling her for some time. Baby sat, as good as gold, nursing a bottle of tomato sauco, snugly wrapped in a dish-towel, in the very spot where she had been when Rick's ring summoned her sister to the door. Only one small flask lay broken on the floor, fill-

"I'm glad you think so," said Mrs. Louisberry. "It don't strike me that way. What are they going to live on?" Louisberry. "It don't strike me that way. What are they going to live on?" "Oh, I'll look after them," said Aunt ing the air with the subtle fragrance of garlie. "That won't be missed," said Lietty. "Thank fortune, there is no worso mischief done." But the "thank" was scarcely uttered when her eyes fell Emory; and her remark makes a very good ending to this real sweet story. "Oh, Baby, why couldn't you have taken any jar but that?" asked Letty, reproachfully and dramatically. But Baby evidently had no excuse to offer for not doing so, for she kept on erooning to her bottle doll, while her sister hastily fashioned another paper hat and tied it securely over what remained of the original covering.

Then said Baby: "Rick tiss I—nice a day or twe. They say he has failed fast lately."

And the very next moment Aunt Emory fixed her spectacled eyes upon her nicce's poor pale face, and asked, sharply: "What's the matter, child? Do yousee anything dreadful in the sweets?"

"No, me'am," answered Letty, with a pitiful attempt at a smile, when the spoon struck something harder than

Her loving disposition, fine womanly qualities, and charitable nature, made her welcome friend to many, by whom she will be sadly missed.

The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, from the residence on Racine street, in the Third ward.

Patience.

Janesville will recoilect with pleasure the admirable performance of the Chicago Church Choir Company, three years ago at Myers' opera house. They gave us Girbert and Sullivan's first "Pinafore" and now we are to have them again in Gilbert and Sullivan's last "Patience."

opera ever seen in that city. Chicago papers usually endorse only what is really first class, and so we are content to accept their verdict on the Church Choir Company's "Patience." People at all familiar with the vocal talent of Chicago choirs will readily see the power of the company in the following numed people: Jennie Dutton, Jeanne Herrick, Mae St. John, Jessie Bartlett, Nellie Wolcott, Ada Somers, John McWade, Charles H. Clark, Charles T. Barnes, Samuel Kayzer, Wm. Wolffe, and John Loughrin. The chorus a grand one, \mathbf{and} the first class. Theorchestra cos. tumes of the ladies the uniforms of the gentlemen, the properties and every needed accessory are as fine as ever were used and there will be a completeness in this performance such as we have not seen since this company played Pinafore here. Since then many new faces and fresh voices have been added to the party, some of whom have appeared here in concert.

Mr. William J. Davis, who organized and equipped the party acompanies it and will superintend each peformanco while Prof. A. Liesegang will conduct the opera. They are to be here on Tuesday, July 25, one night only.

Tuesday August 15th is the day set apart for this great demonstration in Janesville.

The Tax Levy.

A comparison of the tax levy for this year with that of last, shows that the levy for the general city tax is $2,000 less this levy for wards, somewhat larger, the increase aggregating $1,100. This increase is made to cover some work already done and improvements that are into his pouch with his old friend, he contemplated. The whole tax, both ward and city, is about $900 less than it was last year. This is due to the fact that last year. This is due to the fact that were to a certain extent aware of the there is less bonded indebtedness to pay fact. By the way, unless my memory than there was formerly, the amount of has utterly given way to my imagination bonded debt with interest falling due the present year being $9,700. After the first of October, there will be left a bonded debt against the city of only $18,000, a very favorable showing.

 For some years past our German Lutheran brethren in this vicinity have held their meetings munly in private houses, but as their numbers increased this became quite inconvenient, if not entirely impracticable, and this past spring they determined to build a church in our village. They selected and secured a beautiful site on the summit of the hill just east of G. N. Willis' house, and soon had the building under way. Last week the structure 24x40, with 16 feet posts was pronounced complete. It is a plain but neat and tasty building, has a low belfry surmounted with a well propor-tioned cross. The cost of the build-ing is about $1,200, and reflects great credit upon the small society that have voluntarily taxed themselves to baild it. The dedication services were pronounced last Sunday, on which occasion the house was crowded to its ut-most capacity. The services in the morning were in German and in the afternoon in English. Many of our village people were present in the after-noon. The contributions during the

"I gazed upon the tinsel and spangles, And likened them unto the duy, In all its heaven born splendor, As the sunlight is fading away."

This impression pervades every mind after seeing W. W. Cole's famous electric-quired for any possible successor to the old snake-charmer whom old Anglo-Indians may remember to have seen playing with his cobras before Shepherd's (Was he not at the Zoo in the wonderful year 1851, and did he not promptly decline, without thanks, our offer of two or three lively capellos then in the collection?) After some trouble we lighted on a furtive Arab caitiff, in the usual long blue shirt, garded about the waist to form the upper part into a species of spleuchan or sporran. In this he seems to keep his dirty pipe, his packet of frousty tobacco, and whatever small portable property he had acquired more or less honestly. With him we resorted to divers ancient stables and outbuildings in the suburbs, and conjured him to find a snake. Placing a jured him to find a snake. small wooden pipe between his lips he tootled quaintly an old Arab air, now low, but hardly soft, and now high and loud. Thus he wandered, toothing and furtive, and we following and expectant. At last, arriving at an old half dark, evil-smelling stable he appeared to get excited, gave vent to still wilder squeaks and squeals, circled round and round under a big palm tree beam, and at last, with an ear-splitting note, he squatted suddenly down, dashed his hand appar-ently upward, and clutched a big cobra, which he evidently intended us to believe had been charmed from above. I say apparently, for I am certain that he lost the brute out of the "bosom" of his blouse. Now this was very pretty, but hardly satisfactory; so, instead of giving our charmer "backsheesh" (having a man in authority among us,) we promised him bastinado if he did not capture a snake in the open. Very limp about the loins and very yellow did that Arab cattiff show through his brown skin, but we were relentless. "Cobro or Toko!" and so he searched with the greatest care—not to find what, in fact, he did not want to find. At last one of us spied the tail of a good-sized snake protruding from some unuamable rubbish. "Now, my friend, catch us that snake, or". He tootled not— the "or" had taken the music out of him—and, overcoming with a visible effort his shuddering horror, he caught the tail in one hand and rapidly ran the other up the body till he reached Pinning this between his the neck. finger and thumb, he caught up the tail of his blouse, and forcing the brute to close his jaws upon it, tore it out rapidly, Ancient Chinese Burial. The Celestial Empire gives in a recent number an account of a Chinese burial in tormer times. A man of means purchased his coffin when he reached the of forty. He then had it painted three times every year with aspecies of varnish, mixed with pulverized porcelain—a composition which resembled a silicate paint or enamel. The process by which the varnish was made has been lost to the Chinese. Each coating of this paint was made of some thickness, and when dried had a metallic firmness resembling enamel. Frequent coats of this, if the owner lived long, caused the coffin to assume the appearance of a sarcophagus, with a foot or more in thickness of this hard, stone-like shell. After death the veins and the cavities of the stomach were filled with quicksilver for the purpose of preserving the body. A piece of jade was then placed in each nostril and ear and in one hand, while a piece of bar-silver was placed in the other. The body thus prepared was put on a layer of mercury within the coffin; the latter was sealed and the whole committed to its last resting-place. When some of these sarcophagi were opened after the lapse of centuries the bodies were found in a wonderful state of preservation, but they crumbled to dust on exposure to

Cured of Litigation. The perusal of the following poetical epistle is said to have put an end to a lawanit . An opulent farmer applied to an attorney about a lawsuit, but was told he could not undertake it, being already engaged on the other side; at the same time, he gave him a letter of recommandation to a professional friend. The farmer, out of curiosity, opened it and read as follows:

Here are two fat weithers, fallen out together; If you'll fleece one, I'll fleece the other, And make'em agree like brother and brother.
